Dear Professor Dorado:

I have been so much occupied with my official duties this Summer that till now I have been unable to thank you for the copy of the first part of your work on Law and its Ministers.

You have worked your field thoroughly, as you always do, and it is one where sub-soil ploughing can still turn up some things that are new, or new in their view-points in relation to us.

I was struck by your quoting a maxim, of familiar use here, in a form new to me:- Fiat justitia, ruat coelum, we always say. Your citation, and I presume the usage in Spain is, Fiat justitia, et pereat mundus.

Yours sincerely,

Simeon E. Baldwin
