A DICTIONARY OF THE
ANGLO-SAXON LANGUAGE

CONTAINING
THE ACCENTUATION—THE GRAMMATICAL INFLECTIONS—THE IRREGULAR WORDS
REFERRED TO THEIR THEMES—THE PARALLEL TERMS FROM THE OTHER GOTHIC LANGUAGES—THE MEANING OF THE ANGLO-SAXON IN ENGLISH AND LATIN—AND COPIOUS ENGLISH AND LATIN INDEXES, SERVING AS A DICTIONARY OF ENGLISH AND ANGLO-SAXON.

WITH A PREFACE ON THE ORIGIN AND CONNEXION OF THE GERMANIC TONGES—A MAP OF LANGUAGES—AND THE ESSENTIALS OF ANGLO-SAXON GRAMMAR.

BY THE REV. J. BOSWORTH, LL.D.

LONDON:
LONGMAN, REES, ORME, BROWN, GREEN, AND LONGMAN; TALBOYS, OXFORD; STEVENSON, CAMBRIDGE.

MDCCCXXXVIII
19. It is evident, from the preceding extracts, that the pure West-Saxon did not ever prevail over the whole of England, and that in process of time the language approached more or less to the present English, according to its relative position to the West-Saxons. In early times there was, clearly, considerable dialectic variety in the writings of men residing in different provinces. This will be evident by comparing the short specimen from the Northumbrian and Rushworth glosses, † and the extracts from the Saxon Chronicle, ‡ with the quotation from Marshall’s Anglo-Saxon Gospels, || and other works in pure Anglo-Saxon. The difference observable in the language of the most cultivated classes would be still more marked and apparent in the mass of population, or the less educated community. These, from their agricultural pursuits, had little communication with the inhabitants of other provinces; and having few opportunities and little inducements to leave their own neighbourhood, they intermarried among each other, and, from their limited acquaintance and circumscribed views, they would naturally be much attached to their old manners, customs, and language. The same cause operating from age to age would keep united the greater part of the population, or the families of the middle stations of life; it may, therefore, be well expected that much of the peculiarity of dialect prevalent in Anglo-Saxon times, is preserved even to the present day in the provincial dialects of the same districts.

Mr. Thorpe’s Pref. to Cædmon, p. xii.
† § 11 and 12.
‡ § 13.
|| § 9.

In these local dialects, then, remnants of the Anglo-Saxon tongue may be found in its least altered, most uncorrupt, and therefore its purest state. Having a strong and expressive language of their own, they had little desire and few opportunities to adopt foreign idioms or pronunciation, and thus to corrupt the purity of their ancient language. Our present polished phrase and fashionable pronunciation are often new, and, as deviating from primitive usage, faulty and corrupt. We are, therefore, much indebted to those zealous and patriotic individuals who have referred us to the archaisms of our nervous language, by publishing provincial glossaries, and giving specimens of their dialects.*

20. So much has been advanced with the view of showing, what what is generally termed “vulgar language,” deserves some notice, and claims our respect from its direct descent from our high-spirited Anglo-Saxon ancestors, and from its power of expression. It is not asserted that any provincial dialect has issued in a full and uncontaminated stream from the pure Anglo-Saxon fountain; but in every province some streamlets flow down from the fountain-head, retaining their original purity and flavour, though not now relished perhaps by fastidious palates. None can boast that they retain the language of their early forefathers unimpaired, but all may prove that they possess strong traces of it. †

21. A few specimens of provincial dialects are given, beginning with extracts from Mr. Jenning’s neat and valuable little work, being the present dialect of that part where the West-Saxon or pure Anglo-Saxon

The following is a list of the principal provincial Glossaries: — 1. A Collection of 150, price about 4s. —2. An Exmoor Scolding, and also an Exmoor Courtship, with a Glossary, 7th edit. 8vo. Exon. 1881, pp. 60, price 9d. —The Lancashire dialect, with a Glossary, Poems, &c. by Tim Bobbin, Esq. (Mr. John Collier, Schoolmaster at Milnrow, near Rochdale,) 12mo. Manchester, 1775; London, 1818, pp. 212, price 3s.
—4. A Provincial Glossary with a Collection of Local Proverbs, &c. by Francis Grose, Esq. F.A.S. 2nd edit. 12 mo. London, 1790, price 5s. —5. Anecdotes of the English Language, chiefly regarding the Local Dialect of London and its environs, which have not corrupted the language of their ancestors, London, 1803, 8vo. 2nd edit. 1814. —6 An Etymological Dictionary of the Scottish Language, &c. by John Jamieson, D. D. F.R.S.E. & c. 2 vols. 4to. 1808, Edinburgh; 2 vols. 4to. Supplement, 1825. —7. A List of ancient Words at present used in the mountainous Districts of
The Salamanca Corpus: “Dialects from A.D. 900” (1838)

† Forby’s East-Anglia, vol. i. p. 18.

[xxviii]

was once spoken, and then proceeding to East-Anglia, and terminating with the broad dialect of Craven in Yorkshire. In attempting to give the exact pronunciation of each district, some words are so disguised as, at first view, to be scarcely recognised, and occasionally two or more words are pronounced, and therefore written, as one word. This is an ambiguity which could not be entirely avoided; but an ample compensation is made for it by giving the words, as far as possible, in the pronunciation of several districts.

_Dialects of the West of England, particularly Somersetshire._

22. The following are some of the peculiarities observable in the West of England. The people of Somersetshire, east of the river Parret, make the third person singular of the indicative mood, present tense, to end in _th_ or _eth_: thus for he loves, he reads, they uniformly say, _he lov’th_, _he read’th_. They use _Ise_ for _I_, _er_ for _he_, and _her_ for _she_. — _Tget sound â_ as _a_ in _father_; and _e_ as Fench _e_, or as the English _a_ in _cane_, _fane_, &c. —_Th_ is sounded as _d_: for _thread_ they say _dread_ or _dird_; for _through_ _dro_, _thrash_ _drash_; _s_ as _z_, _Zummerzet_ for Somerset, &c. — They invert the order of some consonants: for _trush_, _brush_, _rush_, they say _dirsh_, _birsh_, _hirsh_; for _clasp_, _hasp_, _asp_, they use _claps_, _haps_, _aps_. — They annex _y_ to the infinitive mood, and some other parts of many common verbs, _I canpt sewy_, _he can’t reapy_, _to sewy_, _to nursy_: they also prefix letters; for _lost_, _gone_, _bought_, they say _alost_, _agone_, _abought_.—They often make dissyllables of monosyllables: for _air_, _both_, _fair_, _fire_, _sure_, &c. they say, _ayer_, _booäth_, _fayer_, _shower_, &c. _I be_, _thou beest_ or _bist_, _thee beest_, _we be_, _they or thâ be_, are commonly heard; but rarely or never _he be_, but _he is_. — _War_ is always used for _was_ and _were_; as _I war_, _thee or thou wart_, _he war_, _we war_, _they or thâ war_. — We often hear _we’m_, _you m_, _they’m_, for _we are_, _you are_, _they are_. — They use _thic_ for that: as _thic house_, _thic man_, for that house, that man. — The diphthong _oi_ is often pronounced _wi_: for _spoil_, _boil_, _soil_, we have _spwile_, _bwile_, _pwint_, _swile_, &c. — In _and_, _d_ is often ommited; for _loving_, _hearing_, _singing_, _lightning_, they say _lovin_, _hearin_ or _hirin_, _zingin_, _lightnin_.

As specimens of the Somerset dialect, a dedication in verse and a short dialogue in prose, will be sufficient.

TO THAT DWELLERS O’ THE WEST

_Tha fruit o’ longvul labour, years,
In theäze veo leaves at last appears.
Ta you, tha Dwellers o’ tha West,
I’m pleas’d that tha shood be addresst:_
The Salamanca Corpus: “Dialects from A.D. 900” (1838)

Vor thaw I now in Lunnun dwell,
I mine ye still—I love ye well;
An niver, niver sholl vorget
I vust drâw’d breath in Zummerzet;
Amandst ye liv’d, an left ye zorry,
As you’ll knaw when you hire my storry.
Theäze little book than take o’ me;
’Tis âll I ha jist now ta gee.

[xxix]

FARMER BENNET AN JAN LIDE.*
*A Dialogue.

Farmer Bennet. Jan! why dwon’t ye right my shoes?

Jan Lide. Bin, maester ‘tis zaw cawld, I can’t work wi’ tha tacker at all; I’ve a brawk it ten times I’m shower ta dâ—da vreaze za hord. Why, Hester hanged out a kittle-smock ta drowy, an in dree minits a war a vraur as stiff as a pawker; an I can’t avoord ta keep a good vier—I wish I cood—I’d zoon right your shoes an withers too—I’d zoon yarn zum money, I warnt ye. Can’t ye vine zum work vor me, maester, theäze hord times—I’ll do any theng ta sar a penny. I can drash— I can cleave brans—I can make spars—I can thatchy—I can shear ditch, an I can gripy too, bit da vreaze za hord. I can wimmy—I can messy or milky nif ther be need o’t. I ood’n mine dreavin plough or any theng.

Farmer Bennet. I’ve a got nothin vor ye ta do, Jan; bit Mister Boord banehond ta I jist now that ûh was gwain ta wimmy, an that ûh wanted zumbody ta help ‘em.

Jan Lide. Aw, I’m glad o’t. I’ll hirn auver an zee where I can’t help ‘em; bit I han’t a bin athin tha drashel o’ Maester Boord’s door vor a longful time, bin I thawt that missis did’n use Hester well; but I dwon’t bear malice, an zaw I’ll goo.

Farmer Bennet. What did Missis Boord zâ or do ta Hester, than?

Jan Lide. Why, Hester, a-mâ-be, war zummet ta blame too; vor she war one o’m, d’ye zee, that rawd Skimmerton—thic mâ-game that frunted zum o’ tha gennel-vawk. Thâ zed ‘twar time to a done wi’ jitch litter, or jitch stuff, or I dwon knaw what thâ call’d it; bit thâ, war a frunted wi’ Hester about it; an I zed nif thâ war a frunted wi’ Hester, thâ mid be a frunted wi’ I. This zet missis’s back up, an Hester han’t a bin a choorin there zunz. Bit ‘tis niver-the-near ta bear malice; and zaw I’ll goo auver and zee which wâ tha wine da blaw.
The Salamanca Corpus: “Dialects from A.D. 900” (1838)

The Exmoor Dialect.

23. Exmoor is in the north Somersetshire and Devonshire; it is so called, being the forest or moor in which the river Exe rises.

AN EXMOOR COURTSHIP.

Andrew. Well, cozen Magery, cham glad you’re come agen.

Margery. Wull ye eat a croust o’ brid and cheeze, cozen Andra?

Andrew. No, es thankee, cozen Magery; vor es eat a crub as es come along: bezides es went to dinner jest avore—Weil, bet, cozen Magery, whot onser dest gi’ ma to tha quesson es put vore now-reert.

Margery. What quesson was et?

Margery. Es dont know what quesson ye meean; es begit whot quesson twos.

Andrew. Why, to tell tha vlat and plane agen, twos thes: Wut ha’ ma, ay or no?

Margery. Whot! marry to Earteen?—Es gee tha zame onser es geed avore, es wudent marry the best man in oll Ingland. Es cud amorst zwear chud ne’er marry at oll. And more and zo, cozen Andra, cham a told ya keep company wey Tamzen Hosegood. And nif ya keep hare company, es’ll ha no more to zey to tha.

Andrew. Ay, thes es Jo Hosegood’s flim-flam.—Oh! tha very vengance out o’en.

Margery. No, no; tes none of Jo Hosegood’s flim-flam.

Andrew. Well, well, cozen Magery, be’t how twull, whot caree I?—And zo, good-buy, good-buy t’ e, cozen Magery.—Nif voaken be jealous avore they be married, zo they mey arter. Zo good-buy, cozen Magery. Chell net trouble ye agen vor wone while, chell warndy.

[xxx]
Margery. [Calling after him.] Bet hearky, hearky a bit, cozen Andra! Es wudent ha ye go away angry nether zure; and zure you wont deny to see me drank? Why ya hant a tasted our cyder yet. [Andrew returns.] Come, cozen Andra, here’s t’ye.

Andrew. Na, vor that matter, es owe no ill-will to enny kesson, net I.—Bet es wont drank, nether, except ya vurst kiss and friends.

The Dialect of East-Anglia, or Norfolk and Suffolk.

24. “The most general and pervading characteristic of East-Anglian pronunciation,” says Mr. Forby, “is a narrowness and tenuity, precisely the reverse of the round, sonorous, ‘mouth-filling’ tones of the north of England. The broad and open sounds of vowels, the rich and full tones of diphthongs, are generally thus reduced. Generally—not universally. Some few words become broader, but they become also harsher and coarser. This narrowness of utterance is, in some parts, rendered still more offensive by being delivered in a sort of shrill whining recitative. This prevails chiefly in Suffolk, so as to be called in Norfolk the ‘Suffolk whine.’ The voice of the speaker (or singer) is perpetually running up and down through half or a whole octave of sharp notes, with now and then a most querulous cadence.*

The following are a few of the common contractions and changes: Duffus for dove or pigeon-house; wuddus wood-house; shant shall not; cant cannot; ont, wont will not; dint did not; shunt should not; wont would not; mant may not; warnt were not; eent is not; aint is not; heent has not; hānt had not.—Tut is used for to it; dut do it; wut with it; het have it; tebbin it has been.—We hear cup for come up; gup go up; gout go out; gin go in; giz give us.—The following are very peculiar: k’ye here, or k’ere; h’ye there; h’ye hinder, or k’inder; h’ye thinder, for look ye here, there, and yonder.—Words are often jumbled together, as in this sentence: M’aunt bod me g’into th’archard, and call m’úncle into house.

Derbyshire Dialect.

25. This dialect is remarkable for its broad pronunciation. In me the e is pronounced long and broad, as mee. The l is often omitted after a or o, as aw for all, cav call, bowd bold, coud cold.—Words in ing generally omit the g, but sometimes it is changed into \( k \); as \textit{think} for thing, \textit{lovin} for loving. They use \textit{con} for can; \textit{conner} for cannot; \textit{shanner} for shall not; \textit{wool}, \textit{wooner} for will, and will not; \textit{yo} for you, &c.
The Salamanca Corpus: “Dialects from A.D. 900” (1838)

\textit{A Dialogue between Farmer Bennet and Tummus Lide.}

\textit{Farmer Bennet.} Tummus, why dunner yo mend meh shoon?

\textit{Tummus Lide.} Becoz, mester, ‘tis zo cood, I conner work wee the tachin at aw; I’ve brockn it ten times I’m shur to de—it freezes zo hard. Why, Hester hung out a smoc-frock to dry, an in three minits it wor frozzen as stiff as a proker, an I conner afford to keep a good fire—I wish I cud—I’d soon mend yore shoon, an uthers tow.—I’d soon yarn sum munney, I warrant ye. Conner yo find sum work for m’, mester, these hard times?—I’ll doo onny think to addle a penny. I con thresh * Vocabulary of East-Anglia, Introduction, p. 82.

[xxxi]

—I con split wood—I con mak spars—I con thack. I con skower a dike, an I con trench tow, bur it ireezes zo hard. I con winner—I con fother, or milk, if there be need on’t. I woodner mind drivin plow, or onny think.

\textit{Farm. B.} I hanner got nothin for ye to doo, Tummus; but Mester Boord towd me jist now that they wor gooin to winner, an that they shud want sumbody to help ‘em.

\textit{Tummus L.} O, I’m glad on’t. I’ll run oor an zee whether I con help ‘em; bur I hanner bin weein the threshold ov Mester Boord’s doer for a nation time, becoz I thoot misses didner use Hester well, bur I dunner bear malice, an zo I’ll goo.

\textit{Farm. B.} What did Misses Boord za or doo to Hester then?

\textit{Tummus L.} Why, Hester may-be wor summet to blame too; for her wor one on ‘em, de ye zee, that jawd Skimmerton,—the mak-gam that frunted zum o’ the gente-fook. They said ‘twor time to dun wee sich litter, or sich stuff, or I dunner know what they cawd it; bur they wor frunted wee Hester bout it; an I said, if they wor frunted wee Hester, they mid bee frunted wee mee. This set misses’s back up, an Hester hanner bin a charrin there sin. But ‘tis no use to bear malice; an zo I’ll goo oor, an zee which we the winde blows.

\textit{Cheshire Dialect.}
26. One peculiarity in the province is to change, or soften, the pronunciation of many words in the middle of which the letter l is preceded by a or o. Thus in common discourse we pronounce haw for balk, cauf for calf, hauf for half, wawk for walk, foke for folk, and St. Awbuns for St. Albans; but in the Cheshire dialect, as in all the north, the custom of substituting the o for the a, and the double ee for the igh, prevails in a still greater degree: thus we call all aw; always awways; bold bowd; calf cauf; call caw; can con; cold cowd; colt cwt; fold fowd; gold gowd; false fause; foul fow; fool foo; full foo; fine foin; hold howd; holt howt; half hawf; halfpenny hawpenny; hall haw; long lung; man mon; many mony; manner monner; might meet; mold mowd; pull poo; soft saft; bright breet; scald scawd; stool stoo; right reet; twine twoin; flight fleet; lane loan or lone; mol mal; sight see; sit seet; such sich.

The Lancashire Dialect.

27. Observations on the Lancashire dialect. All and al are generally sounded broad, as aw or o: thus, awl haw or ho, awlus for all, hall, always. — In words ending in ing, k is used for g, as think, wooink, for thing, wooing, &c.—At the end of words d and ed are often changed into t; thus, behint, wynt, awtert, for behind, wind, awkward.—The d is sometimos omitted in and, for which they say an.—It is common, in some places, to sound ou and ow as a; thus tha, ka or ca, for thou, cow. In other places, ou and ow have the sound eaw; thus, for thou, cow, house, mouse, they say theaw, keaw, heawse, meawse.—In some parts o is used for a, and a for o; thus, for part, hand, they say port, hont; and instead of for, short, they say far, shart. —The syllable en or ‘n is generally used in the plural of verbs, &c. as hat’n, lov’n, think’n.—In Lancashire they generally speak quick and short, and omit many letters, and often pronounce two or three words together; as, I’ll got’ or I’ll gut’ for I’ll go to; runt’ for run to; hooost for she shall; intle or int’ll for if thou will; I wou’didd’n for I wish you would.

[xxxii]

Tummus and Meary.
The Salamanca Corpus: “Dialects from A.D. 900” (1838)

Tummus. Odds me! Meary, whooa the dickons wou’d o thowt o’ leeting o thee here so soyne this morning? Where has to bin? Theaw’rt aw on a swat, I think; for theaw looks primely.

Meary. Beleemy, Tummus, I welly lost my wynt; for I’ve had sitch o’traunce this morning as eh neer had e’ meh live: for I went to Jone’s o’Harry’s o’lung Jone’s, for’t borrow their thible, to stur th’ furmetry wheh, an his wife had lent it to Bet o’ my gronny’s; so I skeawrt eend-vey, an’ when eh coom there, hoo’d lent it Kester o’ Dick’s, an the dule steawnd ‘im for a brindl’t cur, he’d mede it int’ shoon pegs! Neaw wou’d naw sitch o moon-shine traunce potter any body’s plucks?

Tummtu. Mark whot e tell the, Meary; for I think lunger ot fok liv’n an’ th’ moor mischoances they han.

Meary. Not awlus.—But whot meys o’t’ sowgh, on seem so dane-kest? For I con tell o’ I’d fene see o’ whick an hearty.

Tummtu. Whick an hearty too! oddzo. but I con tell the whot, its moor in bargin ot I’m oather whick or hearty, for ‘twur seign peawnd t’a tuppunny jannock, I’d bin os deed os o dur nele be this awer; for th’ last oandurth boh one me measter had lik’t o killt meh: on just neaw, os shure os thee and me ar stonning here, I’m actilly running meh country.

The Dialect of Craven.

28. The Deanery of Craven is in the West Riding of Yorkshire. A short specimen will be sufficient.

Dialogue between Farmer Giles and his neighbour Bridget.

Giles. Good morrin to the, Bridget, how isto?
Bridget. Deftly as out, and as cobby as a lop, thanksto.
Giles. Wha. marry, thou looks i gay good fettle.
Bridget. —What thinksto o’t’ weather? Awr house is vara unrid and grimy, t’chimla smudges an reeks seea, an mackst’ reckon, at used to shimmer and glissen, nowght bud soote an muck.
Giles. It’s now a vara lithe day, bud there war a girt roak, an a rag o’t’ fells at delleet, an it looked feaful heavisome.
Bridget. I oft think a donky, mislin, deggy mornin is a sign o’t’ pride o’t’ weather, for it oft worsels up, an is maar to be liked ner t’ element full o’ thunner packs er a breet, scaumy sky.
The Salamanca Corpus: “Dialects from A.D. 900” (1838)

Giles. Wha, when’t bent’s snod, hask, cranchin an slaap, it’s a strang sign of a pash.
Bridget. I’ve oft obsarved there hes been a downfaw soon efter; bud for sure, I cannot gaum mich be ouer chimla at prisent, it’s seea smoored up wi mull an brash. Yusterday about noon, t’ summer-goose flackered at naya lile rate, an t’ element, at edge o’ dark, wor feaful full of filly tails an hen scrattns. —Thou knaws that’s a sartain sign ov a change, sometimes I’ve knaan it sile and teem efter.

An Alphabeticl Glossary of most of the pecuilar Words used in the preceding specimens of Provincial Dialects.

The Salamanca Corpus: “Dialects from A.D. 900” (1838)

30. Many expressive Anglo-Saxon words, which are no longer in use among the refined, have been retained in the provincial dialects. These then ought not to be neglected. The facility and simplicity of combining several short indigenous words to express any complex idea, practised by the Anglo-Saxons and other Gothic nations, is now too seldom used. Instead of adopting technical terms from other languages, or forming them from the Greek or Latin, as is the present English custom, our Anglo-Saxon forefathers formed words equally expressive by composing them from their own radical terms. For our literature they used boc-cræft book-craft, from boc a book, cræft art, science; for arithmetic rimcræft, from rim a number, cræft art; for astronomy tungelcræft, from tungel a star, &c. If, however, we have lost in simplicity, we have gained in copiousness and euphony. In collecting from other languages, the English have appropriated what was best adapted to their purpose, and thus greatly enriched their language. Like bees they have diligently gathered honey from every flower.* They have now a language which, for copiousness, power, and extensive use, can scarcely be surpassed. It is not only used in England, Scotland, and Ireland, but in the whole of North America and Australia: it prevails in the West Indies, and is more or less spoken in our vast possessions in the East. Indeed, wherever civilization, science, and literature prevail, there the English language is understood and spoken.

[xxxv]

* Camden observes: “Whereas our tongue is mixed, it is no disgrace. The Italian is pleasant, but without sinewes, as a still fleetling water. The French delicate, but even nice as a woman, scarce daring to open her lippes, for fear of marring her countenance. The Spanish majesticall, but fulsome, running too much on the o, and terrible like the Divell in a play. The Dutch manlike, but withall very harsh, as one ready at every word to picke a quarrell. Now we, in borrowing from them, give the strength of consonants to the Italian; the full sound of words to the French; the variety of terminations to the Spanish; and the mollifying of more vowels to the Dutch; and so, like bees, we gather the honey of their good properties, and leave the dregs to themselves. And thus, when substantialnesse combineth with delightfulnessse, fullnesse with finenesse, seemlinessse with portlinessse, and currentnesse with staydnesse, how can the language which consisteth of all these, sound other than full of all sweetnesse?” — Camden’s Remains, p. 38, edit. of 1623.