1. State, religion and RE

1.1. Introductory overview

The Catholic Church has exercised its power and played a highly important role in Spanish history, in relation to the state, in relation to society at large, and in relation to education in public and private state or state funded schools.

According to experts, the Catholic Church for centuries almost "held a monopoly over secondary education in Spain, and despite the numerous struggles it had to face, it was in a hegemonic position until the arrival of democracy", i.e. until the death of the dictator Francisco Franco in 1975 (see e.g. Griera 2007: 295). Nonetheless, the conservative political and ideological forces ('confessionalists') have, however, had to battle with more progressive forces ('laicists')\(^1\), not least in regard to the desired or undesired influence of the Catholic Church on education in general and on religious education (RE) in special.

In 1913 it was hotly debated whether the decree on compulsory teaching of the catechism of the Church in primary schools should be modified. The 'solution' was to keep on with the catechism but allowing for parents to withdraw their children from such teaching/preaching. An offensive against the power of the Catholic Church peaked during the Second Republic 1931-1936 but this challenge to the Catholic Church came to a full stop with the dictatorship and politics of General Franco after the end of the Spanish Civil War in 1939.

The privileged position of the Catholic Church was crowned with the 1953 Agreement between the Spanish State and the Holy See (Concordato entre el Estado Español y la Santa Sede). Education was - as written by Griera (2007: 296) "developed on the basis of Catholic dogma and religious teaching was imparted in all schools, public, or private, and at all levels, even at the university".

Following some modifications in the educational system and some proposals as to a 'division of labor' between the Church, Catholic, but state subsidised, private schools and state schools in 1970, it was the death of Franco that paved the way for more recent developments.
However, not without continuous and bitter ideological and political struggles over the role of the Catholic Church in regard to education in general, including moral education, and, linked to that, RE.

\(^1\)In terms of political parties, the adversaries post-Franco have not in frequently been embodied in, respectively, Partido Popular (PP) and Partido Socialista Obrero Español (PSOE).
The 1978 Spanish Constitution, with the additional 1980 law on freedom of religion, and the 1979 Agreements between the Spanish State and the Vatican (Holy See), constitute the two basic pillars also in regard to RE. The state in principle is secular, and the state guarantees freedom of religion (§ 16)\(^2\) and the right to education, and education (§ 27) "shall aim at the full development of the human personality with due respect for democratic principles of coexistense and the fundamental rights and freedoms". At the same time though, this right to education also secures the right of all parents to "obtain for their children a religious and moral instruction which is coherent with their own convictions" (§ 27.3)\(^3\).

The 1979 Agreements between the Spanish State and the Holy See\(^4\) in fact gives the Catholic Church a privileged position in regard to education: every school in Spain must offer confessional RE as a school subject. Due to its confessional character it must be optional but it must be there, and it is the Catholic Church (Spanish Episcopal Conference) that decides and provides the contents (curriculum) and the teachers and their education. But the state pays for it all.

Moreover, notice must be taken of the fact that some 20% of compulsory education, primary and secondary, in Spain takes place at Catholic private but state-subsidised schools (see Grier 2007 and 2014). The above mentioned school catechism has by now been separated from (confessional) religious education: teaching the catechism takes place in churches and confessional religious education takes place in public (and private) schools.

\(^2\)Spanish Constitution. Part I Fundamental Rights and Duties. DIVISION 1.ª Fundamental Rights and Public Freedoms, Section 16 reads: 1. Freedom of ideology, religion and worship of individuals and communities is guaranteed, with no other restriction on their expression than may be necessary to maintain public order as protected by law. 2. No one may be compelled to make statements regarding his or her ideology, religion or beliefs. 3. No religion shall have a state character. The public authorities shall take into account the religious beliefs of Spanish society and shall consequently maintain appropriate cooperation relations with the Catholic Church and other confessions. See http://www.lamoncloa.gob.es/lang/en/espana/leyfundamental/Paginas/titulo_primer0.aspx

1.2. Recent developments and challenges

What follows first is a quick overview of the most recent relevant developments and challenges to the traditional way of handling religious education in Spanish state schools, as well as in the subsidised private Catholic schools:

Firstly: Spain has, as many other European countries, experienced a growth in religious pluralism, due to individualization, globalisation and immigration. Thus the number of immigrants has increased from 2.95% in 1998 to 14.15% in 2011 (Griera 2014:152).

This has several consequences as regards RE. First, the state has had to provide confessional RE for not just the Catholic Church but also for the religious minorities of Jews, Muslims, and Protestants.

Cooperation agreements concluded by the Spanish State and the Federation of Evangelical Religious Entities of Spain, the Federation of Jewish Communities of Spain, the Islamic Commission of Spain were signed in 1992. If a minimum of students/pupils/parents so wish, the state must provide teachers and classes in the respective 'confession'.

This development thus is similar to the one encountered in e.g. Germany: A multi-confessional or plura-confessional system of religious education has come into being, even if it must stressed that the conditions for the other religious groups are not as good as they are for the Catholic Church, and that the implementation of various kinds of non-Catholic confessional RE faces many obstacles, including continued resistance from the Catholic Church as well as from 'laicists'.

Secondly: the growing diversity, including an increased numbers of 'nones' (and of non-practising adherents/believers to the Catholic Church), as well as the secular ideology of the socialists and the arguments of scholars and public opinion makers

Cf. Griera 2007:302; Griera 2014 154-159 with references; Diez de Velasco 2009:501-504 and notes with details on the agreements and the developments within these different kinds of confessional RE

6For the legal situation in Spain as regards religions and denominations see Diez de Velasco 2009: note 8 and idem 2012: 22-25
IERS - Intercultural Education through Religious studies

Baseline Study. Religious Education (RE) in Spain has set in motion fierce debates (see inter alia Griera 2007, 2014; Diez de Velasco 2009) about the introduction of some kind of non-confessional RE dealing with all religions and for all pupils, i.e. some kind of integrative rather than separative RE based on a neutral study-of-religions point of view.

In order to not 'just' fight the Church but to try to construct a common ground for mutual understanding, tolerance, freedom of religion, better integration, social cohesion etc. proposals (see Diez de Velasco 2009:509-526) to that effect were put forward. By the socialist government in 1995 ('Sociedad, Cultura y Religion'), by the conservative government in 2003 ('Sociedad, Cultura y Religión no confesional'), and by the socialist government in 2007 ('Historia y Cultura de las Religiones').

During the same time, in Spain as elsewhere, the need for a school subject aiming at social cohesion and secular moral upbringing has led to the introduction of a subject on citizenship, and the alternatives (see below) to confessional RE, apart from those that explicitly deals with religions in the plural, clearly aim at providing some kind of moral and societal values that may substitute or supplement the religious values hitherto promoted by the school in order for the citizens to become 'good citizens' and for society to be a 'good society'.

Thirdly: the Catholic schools, according to Griera et al. (Griera 2007:203) face a challenge in the shape of parents and pupils who are not actually Catholic and who do not pick the Catholic school because it is Catholic but because it is supposed to be good as regards education in general. Or, parents as well as pupils are members of the Catholic Church but neither practicing nor 'good' believers. Also immigrants frequent the Catholic schools. Here, as elsewhere in Europe (cf. Willaime 2007), the confessional RE and the RE teachers thus face a challenge (see also Griera 2007:304).

Fourthly: Various organisations represent and deal with Catholic education, vis a vis the Catholic schools and training centres, the Spanish state, the regional authorities, and the Vatican too. One such is FERE-CECA (Spanish Federation of Religious Education) and another one is the linked EyG (Education and Management). Besides, the Spanish Catholic Church is not united in its attitudes to education and the role of the church. There are many and various factions also within the Church (see Griera 2014: 150-151, and Diez de Velasco 2012: 175-205), and, following Vatican II, it was also evident that some fractions were in favor of changes and accepted some kind of loss of monopoly in regard to moral and religious education while others continued to be in favor of some sort of monopoly, also seeing the school and education as an important 'bastion' in a struggle to not lose even more influence in Spanish society and culture at large. Some of the changes remarked by e.g. Griera (2014) also regards the stance towards moral education: does it have to come in the explicit shape a dogma-bound catechism-like teaching and preaching or can it be imparted in another more indirect way?

1.3. Religion and religiosity in Spain

According to the foremost Spanish expert in the field, Prof. Francisco Diez de Velasco, the most important figures as of 2012 (Diez de Velasco 2012: 22) are as follows, in numbers and percents of the total population:
- Catholic Christians: 33-36 million = 70-75% (with some 15% practising on a weekly basis, some 60% never or very rarely practising, and some 25% practising from time to time),
- Non-religious or atheists: 10-12 million = 20-25%
- Muslims: 1.2 million = 2.5%
- Evangelical Christians: 1.2 million = 2.5%
- Orthodox Christians: 200.000 - 400.000 = 0.4-0.6%
- Jews: 40.000-50.000 = 0.1%
- Jehovah Witnesses: 110.000 = 0.25%
- Mormons: 40.000 = 0.1%
- Buddhists: 50.000 - 60.000 = 0.1%
- Hindus: 25.000-30.000 = 0.05%
- NRM/alternative spiritualties: 100.000 = 0.2%

Consequently, Spain is still predominantly Catholic but secularization is growing and so is religious pluralism, and this pluralism also pertains to Christianity. In regard to schools and RE, however, Griera (2014:151) has an important remark: Spain is, to a large degree, a federal state. The educational politics to a large degree thus is dependent on the various regions ('comunidadesautonomas') and thus differs from region to region. The degree of autonomy is fairly high on the regional level. What also differs is the socio-religious make-up of the regions. In some of the regions, e.g. Extremadura, Catholicism still reigns mightily, and 92.6 % of the pupils opt for the offered Catholic confessional RE. In other regions, e.g. Catalogne, the number of pupils choosing confessional RE is 43.6%.

2. Educational system(s) and law(s)

The ideological and political struggles mentioned above are also shown in the fact that almost every government since Franco has introduced its own new educational system and law. In this brief study and overview mention is made only of the two most recent ones, both of which are, in the moment of writing (autumn 2014), in function or in the process of initial implementation.
The old law (2006) launched by the socialist government is called L.O.E. (‘Ley Organica de Educación’= ‘Organic Law of Education’)\(^7\) and the new (2013) law, launched by the current conservative government, is called L.O.M.C.E. (Ley para la mejora de la calidad educativa’ =‘Organic Law to Improve Education’).\(^8\) LOMCE is to be implemented at the various levels over the next years.

Second additional ruling. Religious teaching.

1. The teaching of the Catholic religion shall comply with the provisions of the Agreement on Education signed between the Holy See and the Spanish State (1979). To that end and in accordance with the directive of the agreement, the Catholic religion will be included as an area or subject in the educational levels, which will be mandatorily offered by the centers and voluntarily chosen by students.

2. The teaching of other religions shall comply with the provisions of the cooperation agreements concluded by the Spanish State and the Federation of Evangelical Religious Entities of Spain, the Federation of Jewish Communities of Spain, the Islamic Commission of Spain and, where appropriate, to which in the future may subscribe to other faiths.

3. The determination of curriculum and learning standards that allow checking the achievement of objectives and acquisition of skills relevant to the subject Religion is a matter for the respective religious authorities. Decisions about use of textbooks and teaching materials and, where appropriate, supervision and approval thereof correspond to the respective religious authorities in accordance with the provisions of the agreements signed with the Spanish State.

Third additional ruling. Teachers of religion.

1. Those who teach religion, must meet the qualification requirements established for the different studies regulated by this Law, as well as those set out in the agreements between the Spanish State and the different religious confessions.

\(^7\) See Ley Orgánica 2/2006, de 3 de mayo, de Educación: http://www.boe.es/boe/dias/2006/05/04/pdfs/A17158-17207.pdf

2. Teachers who do not belong to the bodies of school officials, but provide education of religion in public schools, will do it under a labor contract, in accordance with the Workers' Statute and the respective competent authorities. The regulation of their working arrangements will be made with the participation of representatives of teachers. It will access the destination using objective criteria of equality, merit and ability. These teachers receive remuneration corresponding to the respective level of education to supply teachers. In any case, the proposal for teaching religious institutions shall be automatically renewed each year. The determination of the contract, full time or part time as required by the needs of schools, it is for the competent authorities. The removal, where applicable, shall comply with law.

10ORDEN ECI/1957/2007, de 6 de junio, por la que se establecen los currículos de las enseñanzas de religión católica correspondientes a la educación infantil, a la educación primaria y a la educación secundaria obligatoria.
Comments:
1. The second additional ruling of L.O.E. 2006 implies, inter alia, that the Catholic religion must be included as an area or subject at all the educational levels. Confessional RE in line with the other religions or confessions mentioned above, must comply with the provisions of the agreements concluded in 1992 between the Spanish State and the Federation of Evangelical Religious Entities of Spain, the Federation of Jewish Communities of Spain, and the Islamic Commission of Spain and, if appropriate, to agreements which in the future may be made between the state and other religions.

2. At the beginning of the course, at all levels, adult students, parents or guardians of minor students are asked to express their choice as to receive or not receive confessional RE.

3. At all levels, according to the decrees (see sources above) establishing the core curriculum for each level, the schools shall provide the necessary organizational frames enabling them to provide proper educational care of those pupils or students who have opted out of confessional RE, ensuring in any case, that the choice made does not result in discrimination. This attention to 'educational care', however, does not force the schools to provide an alternative subject, for instance a study-of-religions based non-confessional RE or any other alternative subject.

4. Only at the level of Secondary Compulsory Education (ESO) the national law of L.O.E. established as an alternative the non-confessional teaching about “History and Culture of Religions”.

5. The assessment (grading) of the teachings of the confessional RE as well as the non-confessional 'history of religions and culture' are to be conducted on the same terms and with the same effect as the other subjects of the stage. However, according to L.O.E. the evaluations shall not be included and count in academic record of the pupil.

6. The curriculum of confessional RE is the responsibility of the relevant religious authorities. The curriculum of “History and Culture of Religions” shall be established by decree on the same terms as are the other subjects of the stage.

7. Teachers of confessional RE are selected by the religious authorities.
2.1.3. Main characteristics and innovations of L.O.E. in regard of RE:

- That the assessment (grading) in the subject (confessional RE as well as “History and Culture of Religions”) does NOT count in regard to the pupil’s progress into the next class, or in regard to winning awards and being granted scholarships.
- The introduction of “History and Culture of Religions” with an innovative syllabus (see below 2.3)\(^\text{11}\).
- A compulsory subject, “Citizenship Education and Human Rights” was added to the curriculum of primary and secondary school (ESO). It was introduced by the socialist government upon the recommendation of the Council of Europe to promote civic and human values\(^\text{12}\).

2.2. Confessional Catholic RE: L.O.E.

The curriculum/syllabus, the contents, aims and evaluation criteria of confessional RE is, as said, determined by the Catholic Church.

2.2.1. Catholic RE ESO level

A translation of some of the most telling sections devoted to the secondary level (ESO) reads\(^\text{13}\).

OBJECTIVES
At the end of Compulsory Secondary Education, it is intended that the students are able to:

1. Understand and interpret the different elements of the religious phenomenon in its structure and historical expressions as a basis for understanding the different religions.
2. Discuss in a rational way the answers given by the major religions to the questions posed by human beings regarding Man and his ultimate destiny.
3. Know the Bible, in its origin, structure, purpose and relevant interpretation related to the history and religious experience of Israel, and as an expression of the revelation of God the Father to mankind.
4. Know the contents of Christianity underlying the notion of human beings as created by God and destined to be His son.
5. Identify Jesus Christ as the Son of God, savior incarnate among men, through knowledge and analysis of his message and his life and the presence of the Holy Spirit.

\(^\text{11}\) It must be added that this innovative RE never became a success in terms of number of pupils choosing it.

\(^\text{12}\) This subject, sometimes in other countries linked to RE, was in Spain opposed by conservatives, and it has been removed from the curriculum of L.O.M.C.E. by the current (2014) conservative government.

\(^\text{13}\) See BOE núm.158 (03/07/2007) pages 28282-28685
6. Analyze and evaluate the meaning and purpose of the Church as an institutional embodiment of the humanizing service and salvation that Christ offers to human beings, and discover their contribution to the most important processes of the Spanish and European history.
7. Understand and assess the response of believers to the message and the Christian accomplishment, taking place with and in the Church.
8. Understand and distinguish the salvific action of Christ, and the celebratory nature of each one of the sacraments.
9. Discover the rational and revealed justification of moral education of the Catholic Church guiding man's relationship to God, himself, others and the world.
10. Analyze the requirements and commitments of Christians in their relationship to God, themselves and others, relating it to other options in society and within the major religions.
11. Recognize and appreciate the milestones of the Christian faith in the history of Church, in the great works of culture and festivals, considering also the contributions from other religions.
12. Analyze the principles underlying the Christian faith in eternal life, valuing critically the proposal of the great religions.

FIRST SCHOOL YEAR.

CONTENTS.
1. The primitive human being confronted with the environment, death and the afterlife. The sense of funeral worship and sacrificial rites.
2. The mythical stories about man and God in the religions already disappeared: Mesopotamia, Egypt, Greece and Rome.

14. The morality of acts in Christianity and its relation to moral proposed by Buddhism (meaning 'happiness') and Islam (moral value of 'work').
15. The Virgin Mary, model of the believer.

EVALUATION CRITERIA
1. Notice the elements of primitive religions that have some relation to the current religious culture.
2. Distinctions between mythical tales of antiquity and Revelation of God in Christianity.
3. Develop the concept of man in Christianity and its impact on the foundation of the rights and duties of human beings.
4. Explain the origin and meaning of the world and life, as a result of the loving plan, merciful providence of God the Father.
5. Know how to relate Jesus Christ to the expectations of the Old Testament.
6. Learn how to reason the meaning of salvation from sin and death that Jesus Christ offers the believer.
7. Acknowledge the message of the Kingdom and the Beatitudes as a form of life of those Christians who identify with Jesus Christ, and to know how to attribute to the Church the parables of the Kingdom of God.
8. How to discuss in a reasoned way the principles and values that underpin Christian morality, applying especially current problems of life.
9. Learn to provide arguments for the value of sexuality as a gift from God and in collaboration with Him in the creation, and know how to apply the fundamentals of Christian morality to sexual life.
10. Deduct from the sacrament of Matrimony the values of total dedication, commitment, loyalty and sense of procreation.
11. Compare the meaning of happiness, and the means to attain moral proposal Buddhism, Christianity and Islam.

SECOND SCHOOL YEAR.

CONTENTS
1. The religious phenomenon and its language. The search for God and its religious expression, historical, cultural and social.
2. Religious experience as an anthropological reality. The sense of transcendence. The big questions of man in which religion is rooted.
3. The fullness of religious experience: the encounter between man and God. Christianity and the revelation of God in the events and words attested by the Bible.
4. Evil and sin. The break between man and God. The value of mediation.
5. Jesus Christ, true God and true Man, our Mediator.
6. Jesus Christ reveals to man his origin, his condition and his destiny as a child of God.
7. The confession of faith in the Incarnation, Death and Resurrection of Jesus in the first Christian communities. The presence of Mary in the mystery of Christ.
8. The living presence of God in the Church, the universal sacrament of salvation. The Church continues the work of Jesus Christ, animated by the Holy Spirit.
10. Manifestations of God's grace: origin, purpose and meaning of the sacraments of Baptism, Reconciliation, Eucharist and Anointing of the Sick. Relations between these sacraments and human life.
13. Moral regarding truth and personal authenticity. His presence in the media communication.
14. Christian commitment in building the earthly city and valuing the contributions of other religions.
15. The civilization of love: God promises a new heaven and a new earth.

EVALUATION CRITERIA
1. Identify the main elements that constitute the religious phenomenon and its expression in Christianity in particular.
2. Describe the meaning of life from the religious experience in the major religions.
3. Discuss personal responsibility that comes with sin as a harm to oneself, as against others and as separation from God.
4. Explain the meaning of Christian faith and identification with Jesus Christ and its full realization in eternal life.
5. Know how to use the message of some texts and biblical events to check the manifestations of God, and learn to argue that Jesus Christ is true God and true man.
6. Interpret the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ as the source of love, forgiveness, hope and new birth for the children of God.
7. Specify concrete signs of the presence and action of God in the life of the Church.
8. Explain why Christians love and celebrate God's love as the root of their parenting.
9. Be able to establish relationships between human life and the sacraments of Baptism, Reconciliation, Eucharist and Anointing of the Sick.
11. Can identify in some specific situations and attitudes facts that go against the truth.
12. Illustrate with examples the social actions performed by their church institutions.
13. Explain why, according to Christian faith, God's Kingdom will reach its fullness in new world, recreated by God.

THIRD SCHOOL YEAR
CONTENTS
1. God’s plan for man according to Judaism, Christianity and Islam.
2. The progressive revelation of God to the people of Israel. Judaism.
6. Analysis of the sources (Jewish, Roman and Christian) about the life of Jesus and his time. The historicity of the Gospels. Jesus Christ, true God and true man.
8. The Church, the People of God. The mission of the Church: catholic and missionary character. The sacraments of Confirmation and Holy Orders.
9. The Faith, Christian response to the person of Jesus Christ. Reasons to believe and attitudes of believers. the Beatitudes
13. First Christian Art: the Good Shepherd, the catacombs, Christian symbols apostolic communities.
15. Mary, the embodiment of hope.
16. The coming of the Lord, judgment and eternal life.

EVALUATION CRITERIA
1. Differentiate the basic elements of God’s plan for man in monotheistic religions.
2. Identify the genre and the author of several texts of the Bible.
3. Link texts of the Bible, Tradition and the Magisterium of the revelation of God.
4. Learn to relate the experience of liberation of Israel with the presence of God as a loving Father in the midst of his people.
5. Chronologically place the most important milestones of the revelation of God to prepare the incarnation of the Son, and to note the historical sources on the life and work of Jesus Christ.
6. Discuss the foundation of the Church as communion, its signs and consequences in believer’s life by the Spirit.
7. Discuss how the charismata and ministries develop the mission of the Church.
8. Distinguish faith as a gift of God and as a reasonable response by the human being.

11. Identify the major milestones of Christian art as an expression of the people's faith and manifestation of God's action in the world.
12. Report, with reference to some texts from Vatican II, on the contributions of the Church to the dialogue with the world. Comments:

This curriculum is heavily confessional and therefore thoroughly based upon and permeated by the doctrines and self-understanding of the Catholic Church. However, it also bears some evidence to the need for the Church and for Catholic confessional RE to, one way or the other, include some perspectives on other religions and non-religious worldviews and values. The world ‘around’ - to say so - has crept into the curriculum even if closely tied to the understanding of the Catholic and Christian religion, god and moral as the one and only truth, the one and only truth and good moral that all other religions and their moral ‘proposals’ either diverge from or reflect. Though the truth is one, the Catholic Church is not presented as the only existing religion and the religious teachings and morals of the Church to a certain degree must be served up in a way that brings them somewhat in line with non-religious values. The efforts to ‘up-date’ the teachings and the moral are as evident as is the effort to, of course, stress that the teachings are in line with tradition and the original message. A 'doctrinal' approach is thus supplemented by a life-stance approach (including the claim that the religions all are 'answers' to the same fundamental human questions and that the 'answer' of Christianity is but the most complete and true one based as it is on the (postulated) revelation of God and the incarnation of God in Christ. A small window is thus opened to a more comparative teaching about other religions and non-religions, in the past and present, and to their teachings and morals. The role of the Church and Christianity in the history of Spain is thus also supplemented by teaching about Islam and Judaism e.g. in the period of Muslim rule in Spain.

2.3. The alternative: 'History and Culture of religions' in LOE

The L.O.E. 'History and Culture of Religions' offered as an option and alternative to confessional RE was, as noticed above, an innovation of L.O.E. And, it most certainly reflected some of the intentions for the more study-of-religions based subjects (see above) discussed and planned but never realized.

'History and Culture of Religions' was/is not offered on the upper-secondary non-compulsory school level but only on the compulsory secondary level (ESO) and experts agree, see above, that it was never a big success amongst pupils. Moreover, it has been deleted from the L.O.M.C.E.
In spite of this, the curriculum is rendered below since this is the only subject in the Spanish public school that reflects/reflected some of the ingredients and approaches of anon-confessional integrative RE to be found in some other countries and promoted as the basis for the digital modules produced by the IERS project. Since the subject does not figure in the L.O.M.C.E. we do not though, offer any comments. The curriculum read(s) (in Castilla y León):

OBJECTIVES
1. Recognize religion in its various forms and identify the basic features of the major religions.
2. Understanding the origin and development of religions in the political, social and cultural context in which they emerged and developed and relate them to the evolution of the people in the different facets of his historical reality.
3. Identify the most significant feats of the three religions that have influenced the history and culture of Spain most significantly and their main contributions to the political, cultural and social development of Spain.
4. Analyze the factors underlying the religious fact, realities and aspirations that animate human problems, and relate the religious facts of the past with contemporary manifestations of religion.
5. Assess religious traditions, cultural and artistic events and socio-cultural heritage generated by religious traditions.
6. Understand and assess the most significant comments and opinions, whether from philosophy or from other forms of culture, on religion, throughout history and today.
7. Analyze moral systems offered by different religions, compare each of its elements, showing the consistency between them and their implications for the individual as well as for society.
8. Analyze the historic, intellectual, cultural and politic processes that have turned freedom of conscience and religious liberty into the foundation of western civilization.

The option to offer an alternative at this level depends on the regional governments

3.1.2. Main characteristics and innovations of L.O.M.C.E. in regardto RE

- “Citizenship Education and Human Right” has been deleted from the curriculum of primary school and ESO (Compulsory Secondary Education).
- “Social and Civic Values” is introduced as a new (alternative) subject in primary school and so is “Ethical values” in ESO. Both subjects can function as an alternative to confessional RE (parents or students can choose between confessional RE or the alternative subject) but there is also the possibility to attend both subjects. Those choosing confessional RE will thus also have the opportunity to partake in classes on ethical, social and civic values.

\textsuperscript{15}See Esteban Garcés 2014. The books by Garcés give the most detailed description of the LOE and LOMCE with special regard to RE. See also from the same author, “Para comprender la LOMCE. Análisis y comentarios de la Ley para el profesorado de Religión (available at http://www.smconectados.com/recursos_educativos_para_inicio_de_curso_LOMC.html ) where RE is dealt with in the second section of the booklet and includes descriptions of relevant public debates.

- The assessment in these subjects now does count in regard to the pupil’s progress into the next class, as well as in regard to winning awards and being granted scholarships.
- The syllabus of the subject “Valores Sociales y Cívicos” is prescribed in detail, while the syllabus of the subject “Valores éticos” is not yet pre- or described (considering that the introduction of L.O.M.C.E at secondary school level is planned for 2015/2016)
- There are no changes as regards the pre-school level and the non-compulsory secondary level (Bachillerato).

3.2.1. Confessional Catholic RE: L.O.M.C.E

The curriculum/syllabus, the contents, aims and evaluation criteria of confessional RE continues to be determined by the Catholic Church. The 'Conferencia Episcopal Española' has issued a new document with a complete curriculum for all the compulsory levels in school.17

Focusing on the same level, namely the compulsory secondary education (ESO), the text (dated 30.12.2013, pp. 29-50) in question by and large corresponds to the one rendered above for the L.O.E.

The preamble stresses the need for the school, especillay with reguard to the aims of the new law to add to the quality of the education, to integrate all the cpabilities of the human being in the educational process, including - as it says - a capability for the transcendent. Or: "This basic capacity of the individual, finds its true fulfillment in pursuit of the ultimate meaning of life." (Ibid. p.29). And it continues: " Rooted in the depths of being, the student discovers it - taking into account the levels of learning for each age - in the symbols and signs in their environment, progress and humanization of the human being, in the narrative language of the Bible, Christian role models and, particularly, in the person of Jesus Christ and His presence in the Christian community."

Furthermore, it is stated that the RE provides "encouraging appreciation of the pupil's own culture and provides them with appropriate knowledge/opinions of other cultural and religious traditions" (Ibid. p. 30), and "respect for diversity" is also mentioned, more specifically as a "consequence of Christian faith".

17The complete document can be found at http://educarconjesus.blogspot.com.es/2014/02/el-curriculo-de-religion-catolica-en-la.html

Stress is put on mentioning that the curriculum, teaching and learning is linked to and furthering four specific competences, called, respectively, the "cultural and historical dimension", "humanizing dimension", the "ethical and moral dimension", and the "epistemological dimension".

As stated above: Though the objectives and contents with regard to the Christian religion and Catholic Church do differ much from those pertaining to L.O.E., it is noteworthy that the explicit mentioning of the other major religions, of the religious phenomena as such, is now no longer there. In spite of the above mentioned aim of providing "knowledge/opinions of other cultural and religious traditions" as well as "respect for diversity".

Apart from inculcating specific knowledge and appreciation of the Catholic doctrines, moral, values, etc. the curriculum focuses on "further deepening of religious content in response to the demand of the person open to transcendence and search for the ultimate meaning of his existence with all its ethical implications."

In a final section the pedagogy of the RE teacher is said to be modelled on the "pedagogy of God" and the "pedagogy of Jesus". Religious education thus become true education, i.e. the furthering of an "interpersonal relationship between God who seeks man, and the man who seeks the meaning of life."(p.50).

Not much study-of-religions based RE in this, then. It seems to be even more confessional, so to speak, than the curriculum for L.O.E. And with L.O.M.C.E. there is no longer the alternative "History and Culture of Religion".

4. Religion-related topics and themes in other compulsory secondary school (ESO) subjects

The Spanish school curriculum, just like most others, holds several subjects that might have curricula in which religion or religion-related matters are mentioned and taught, one way or the other. Contrary to what is the case in France, this has not become the place for teaching more and in a more qualified manner about religion, and it is hard if not impossible to say to what a degree teachers teach religion and in what way and to what a degree in the instances listed below. But the possibility is there.

Considering that in Spain, the regional educational authorities are responsible for establishing the curriculum of compulsory education and post compulsory education, with 65 percent of the school schedules (55 percent for the regions that have co-official language), devoted to the development of the national core curriculum, it is necessary to pick one region. In what follows, this region is the autonomous community of Castilla y León and the curriculum is that pertaining to L.O.E. Each excerpt is followed by a comment revealing why we think a link to RE might be possible.

4.1. Natural sciences

OBJECTIVES
8. Develop habits favorable to the promotion of personal and community health, providing strategies to address the risks of modern society on issues related to food, consumption, drug addiction and sexuality.

Comment: Morals, including sexuality and drugs. Morals as regards sexuality has been high on the agenda of the Catholic church.

Comments: compare and contrast secular ethics and morality with religious (i.e. that of the Catholic Church) as taught for instance in confessional RE in school.

4.4 History and culture of religions

Identical to the curriculum translated and rendered above (pp. xx-xx).

5. Religion-related topics and themes in other post-compulsory secondary school (Bachillerato) subjects

With reference to what was written in regard to religion-related topics in the compulsory secondary school (ESO) as well as to the relative autonomy of the regions, a selection of topics in various school subjects that might be related to teaching religion is presented below and ever so briefly commented on:

5.1. Common Subjects

5. I .1. SCIENCES FOR CONTEMPORARY WORLD.

CONTENTS

Block 2. Our place in the Universe

Comments: Here as in ESO, theories of evolution may be accompanied by the Christian myth of creation and the idea about the major Christian god as the one and only creator.

Block 3. Living more, living better.
– The genetic revolution. The human genome. Recombinant DNA technology and genetic engineering. Applications (in the therapy of human diseases in crop and animal production, biotechnology, etc.).

EVALUATION CRITERIA
8. Learn the scientific basis of genetics and embryo manipulation, weigh the pros and cons of its applications and understand the international controversy that have arisen, being able to substantiate the existence of a Bioethics Committee defining its limits in a responsible management framework of the human life.
9. Analyze the successive scientific explanations to problems such as the origin of life or the universe, emphasizing the importance of hypothetical-deductive reasoning, the value of the evidence and the influence of social context, differentiating them from the ones based on the opinions or beliefs.

Comments: Here as above, theories of evolution may be accompanied by the Christian myth of creation and the idea about the major Christian god as the one and only creator. Furthermore, bioethics may be compared to religious ethics and the points of views of the Catholic Church in regard to assisted reproduction may be presented and discussed.

5.I.2. PHILOSOPHY AND CITIZENSHIP

OBJECTIVES
7. Adopt an attitude of respect for differences and a critical stance to any attempt to justify social inequality and discrimination based on either sex, ethnicity, culture, beliefs and other individual and social characteristics.

Comment: Religion may be drawn into discussions in various ways.

CONTENTS
Block 3. The human being: person and society:
– The biological dimension: evolution and hominization.
– Mind and body: conscience
– The human dimension and the personal reality: dignity.
– Philosophical conceptions of the human being.
– The meaning of life and the religious fact

Comments: Here, what is called the 'religious fact' (=religion?) is mentioned explicitly. Secular and religious conceptions of the mentioned themes may be compared.

Block 4. Moral and political philosophy:
– The foundations of moral action: freedom and responsibility.
– The moral justification: moral judgments and arguments.
– Formal ethics and material ethics.

Comments: Religious and non-religion ethics may be compared.

EVALUATION CRITERIA
1. Recognize and explain with precision and exactitude the characteristics of philosophy, distinguish it from other ways of knowledge or explanation of reality, differentiating its theoretical and practical aspects, focusing on fundamental questions and problems.
2. Understand and appreciate the philosophical ideas that have contributed, in different historical times, to define the category of citizen, from Classical Greece to global citizenship in the contemporary world, with particular emphasis on the Enlightenment times and the foundation of Human Rights.
3. Recognize and analyze latent and emerging conflicts of today's complex societies, their achievements and difficulties, major changes and challenges that contextualize the socio-political activity of citizens, showing a critical attitude towards any attempt to justify social inequalities or situations discrimination.

Comments: as above: compare and discuss non-religious and religious philosophy and ethics.
5.I.3. HISTORY OF SPAIN.

– The characteristics and importance of the genetic code and the experimental evidence on which it rests. Genetic transcription and translation in prokaryotes and eukaryotes.
– Genomics and proteomics. Geneticallymodifiedorganisms.

EVALUATION CRITERIA
7. Describe the mechanisms of transmission of hereditary characteristics according to Mendelian hypothesis, and subsequent chromosome theory of heredity, applying them to solve problems related to it. Explain the role of DNA as the carrier of genetic and related to protein synthesis information, the nature of the genetic code and its importance in advancing in genetics, mutations and their impact on the variability of living organisms, in the evolution and the health of people.

Comments: see above on ethics, religious or non-religious in relation to reproduction, sexuality, gene manipulation etc.

5.III.2. BIOLOGY AND GEOLOGY

OBJECTIVES
2. Know the data we have from inside the Earth and develop with them an explanatory hypothesis about its composition, formation process and dynamics.

6. Understand the vision offered by the explanatory theory of evolution about the diversity of living things, integrating specific crisis events pointed by geology, to get to the proposal of punctuated equilibrium

CONTENTS

5. The kingdom of plants:
– Reproduction: asexual and sexual. Life cycle of plants. Human intervention in reproduction (the last part also applicable to human beings)

6. The animal kingdom:
– Reproduction: asexual and sexual, the special case of parthenogenesis. The reproductive strategies.
