LAMPLUGH CLUB.
CAN ya remember owt o' "Lampla Club" when it was a full voag. aboot 1808?

Aa was at yan o' ther girt yearly club days at t' Cross, an' can tel ya summat aboot it. It's still hoden o't second Friday o' Joon, an' that year a reet het day it was. It was Wilson o’ Mowerkin's* turn to be President, an' a grand leukan fellow he was as he marcht ta church an' back ageann, wid a blue sash ower his shooders and a girt flag flappen abeun his heed. A gay lock o' fwok hed giddert up i' time ta gang to t' church, an' away we struttit, A band o' music went furst, an' than t' President, like sum girt general at t' heed av an army; bit a querish army he hed to follow him! T' preest, oald Mr. GREGSON, marcht next tull am, an' than a few cupples o't' oaldest men int' club; and than ivry kind went, ov o' sworts, an' sizes, an' ages; bit a lot o’ t' bettermer swort went afoor t' rest. Lampla' church was as full as it cud cram, for sum 'at com in leatt hed ta stand o’ t' time, an' two or three bits o' lasses fentit an' hed to be bworn oot. It's weel it was nea warse, for it was parlisch sweltry. When t' singers began, sum o' t' music men streukk in wa ther girt gruntan horns an' things, an' playt base. Aa hardly thowt it whyte reel, bit it was varra nice, an' it meadd ma o' thirl sumtimes.

T’ oald man gev its a canny laal sarman, an’ aa dar say a reet gud an'; and nea doot he wad git his ginn for' t, 'at oald Lord Lampla' left in his will, ta be gien to t' preest for preachan that day as lang as t’ club hods tagidder. Sek crushing theer was amang t’ lads ta git oot! bit t' President meadd tham o' fo' back an keep theer pleasses efter him. When we gat to t' Cross theer was mair an' mair cumman ivry noo an' than, an' fwok squeezt in to t’ dinner teables till theer was hardly room to lift a fork. They dinnert on hofe o' t' etterneun, an't' band playt, bit t' main fun dudden begin till t' edge o’ t' ibnin.

Fwok keept cumman in still fray o’ parts—

"Lampla' an’ Loweswater, lang men an' lean.

"Ho-s, roags, an' theeves, fray Branthet on' Dean.”*
an' menny a yan 'at wad hardly hev sek anudder holiday till t' next club day mebby. Beath o' t' hooses^ was far ower laal to hod a quarter o' them, an' fwok hed to stand aboot int' lonnin, or lig ageann t' dykes, an' lissen t' band playan, or chatter away amang theirsells. Till o' t' dinneran was ower theer wazzant a chance o' gittin owt ta drink oot o' doors, an' sum went an' drank at Lund spoot, while yan or two brayzent fellows fray Harras Moor squeezt in an' brang oot a quart in ayder hand, for theirsells an' sek like; an' mebby reet aneuff,—if they nobbet payt for't! On efter dinner a bit, when fwok hed gitten a glass or two round, t' President began to tell t' club fwok hoo t' club matters steudd, and hoo mickel mair they hed this year in t' iron kist, an' than theer was a cheer, an’ t’ oot de uurr wondert what was ta cum next.

Than he telt them hoo menny new members hed entert this year, an' he sed ther consarns was flurrishin famishly; an' theer was anudder hurray! An' than he sed he whopt ivry body wad join, an' t' club wad seunn be as strang as t’Bank ov Ingland; an to be shoorn, that dud bring oot a hurray! an't' lads oot side teukt up an' meadd o' ring ageann.

Than t' hoose fwok gat mair help, an’ they set furms an' oald barrels oot ageann t’ hoose side, an' on be t' dykes; an' fwok dru into knots o’ ther oan kind, an' fell to crakan an' chatteran like a hundred wizzels in a steann wo. Oald Carter was theer fray t' mill, and he'd teann gud kearr to git into fettle seunn on, an' he capert in an' oot un' chattert like a teamm pyet, amang fwok he'd niver seen afoor. He gat helpt up on a plank 'at was laid cross two barrels, an wad co’ a seall.

An’ just when ho was gaan to strike off a lot “goin, goin,” sum unlucky elf gev t’ barrels a shuv, and doon he com like a slatter. An' when he was fairly dun ower for owt else, he cud still rwor oot, "go Billy, go,“ as if he was fleean away astride ov his oald gallapan horse.

T’ crak gat varra thrang noo, an’ t’ fell-deall lads talkt aboot ther cur dogs an' t’ best way to cure t’ scab, an' telt how menny sheep they'd hed smoort it girt Martinmas snow. Branthet chaps hed gitten Fisher ov Innerdal brig amang them, an' he keept them o' laughan wid his droll stwories aboot cockfeytin; an than he gat a match meadd for a main o' cocks ageann Easter. They treatit him, an' he led them on at fine peazz!

Harras Moor fellows was a kind o’ hofe fratchan wi' Dissenton fwok aboot ther bull-dogs an' tarriers, bit they'd been darkan an' lissenan at t' seamm time, an’ when they hard a word aboot a cockfeyt, they wad hev a finger in it teah. Bit Fisher saw what was gaan to be up, an' he wazzenz lingu till he hed them o' feytan togidder, an’ o' was towry-lowry!

He was a rare eg-battle, bit he teukk gud care to keep at ootsido hissell.

When this scruffel was on, t' Whillime lions coudn't be whyet, an’ they com forrat an' shed they war enny o’ them riddy for enny body, an’ Symy Lock hed a bit ov a toozel wid sum o' them.

An' rare wark theer wad ha' been if Will Litt* heddent sprang in amang them an' sed they dudden feyt, an' he whangt them aboot like as menny geslins: bit he dudden git them fairly partit till sum o’ them gat gay bleuddy feasses. T' meast o’ them was willin to giv way ta him, for they o' knew it was neah single handit job ta cum cossways o’ him, an' it o' settelt doon ageann.

Them in t’ hoose hed gitten gayly croozy by this time, and famish craks they hed.

Willy Pearson was leatish o’ cumman, an’ he popt his heed in at t’ deur, an' sez “winge, what hoo preuv ye o?” and sek a laugh it raizt!

Oald Jobby, + o’Smeathat, crakt o’ poers aboot his white bitch, Countess, an' two or three mair hounds he hed; an’ he telt yan ov his fox-huntin stwories, hoo he tally-ho't a fox ya gay rough hit o' grund it is! Hoo he shakt them off a bit theer, an' they at him ageann, an' meadd o' ring amang t' rocks. Hoo they ran him roond be Black Sale, an' Lizza hee faulds, an' clam oot be t' Scarf Gap, an' on to t' Wo' heed, an' they beeldit am onder t' Brock Steann, an' he was scaff aneuff theer! Fwok o' lisset ta sek a huntin teall, an' when it was ower they buzzt and talkt yan amang anudder, like bees in a het day.

Will Pearson o' Bannockrow tell» guy good stwory aboot his runnin t' trail ov a brock frayt fairy-whols* tull aboot Eskat woods, wid his five white dogs; an' they startit t' brock theer, an' Jossy Steel man streukt dykin ax intat brock's buttock; bit he mannisht ta git intat whol efter, an' wjid likely de theer.

Deyell+ o' Stocka Ho', an' Jothon Branthet, talkt aboot gedderan tithe; an Jo Deall sed theer cud be nowt. so good as Lampla puddin.‡

Tom Brown, an' William Frear, an' oald Billy Graham, and Banker Billy,§ wid his wig and pigtail, gat tagidder, an' talkt lang aboot aljibra,—bit they gat o' t' crak to thersells; an' some o' them wondert if Johnny Ware wad put owt in t' "Packet" next week, aboot sec deeins as they hed theer.

Harrison o' Watter Yat thowt. "the virginity o' man was cum till a parlish pass, when fwok cud lock t' wheels ov a wood-waggon to hinder't o' runnin amain —an' he remembert time when three woo wheels was gangan in his oan boose, an' noo theer was two marvel chimla pieces an' what nut!"

Jwony Braythat squeekt and meadd rymes ivry noo an' than, an' meadd o' fwok laugh.

‡ Lamplugh pudding consisted of biscuits or buns steeped till soft in hot ale, with seasoning and spirits according to taste.
§ The late Mr. W. Dickinson, of Kidburngill.
Saul o' t' Ho' wad talk aboot nowt bit Lampla' hokey bulls, an' sec-like, and he seunn went off heamm.

Willy Fisher, wid his hair o’ plettit roond, smuekt cleet leaves an' annaseeds, an' talkt aboot t' best way o’ makkin mote; an' a deel o' tham wondert what sec a feutt-bo lake they wad hev at Leeps boddam next Easter Sunday.

Jwon White, o't' Hollins, was in for shuttan snipes, an' skooderan them doon i’ t' Scalla* springs, i’ hard weather; bit sum o' them telt am he sud ha' been pooan his sheep oot o't' snow drifts astead o' shuttan snipes, an’ he sliknt away oot.

Mattha Jackson bragt aboot findin an eagle liggan deed, at Murton-brow-heed, when he was a bit ov a lad; an' it was t' last 'at hed been seen i' t' country. He sed it hed claws as thick as his thooms, an' they war neah laal ans! Mattha shot in wid a stwory aboot his trailan a car-wheel up to Knockmurton pike an' settan 't off doon t' screes. It went like a mill-o'-fire, an' leapp fray crag to crag, an' was smasht o' to flinders afoor it gat doou into Cogra Moss.

Clark Antony winkt an' girt an' set feasses, an’ sang—

“My wife is dead, and I an free,

“Seah far tha weel soor apple tree;”

an’ mennv a rare sang was sung beside, till t’ loft was wantit for t’ dancers. An' than sek a kick-up! T' lasses an' lads war seunn o’ oot on t' fleurr tagiddar, an' dansan pell-mell, fit ta brek t' loft doon. A deal o' t' elder set began ta sydel away when t' fiddles streuk up, an' sum o' t’ rest began la git rayder ower full, an' gat ta janglin like owt.

bleud mi o! Gayly leatt on next mwarnin some o' them land Jacop poon brackins to lig doon on i' Murton lonnin.

They refuse't to let Kit Marshall hev enny mair ta drink, an' pot am oot, an' off he went heamm in his tantrums, an' was seunn back wid his ax ower his shooder, an' began to hag his way throo t' deur, an' swear he was nobbet carvan his cwot ov arms on't, bit efter sek wark as that we'ed better say laal mair aboot it. It was noo gittan on ta daybrek, an’ dansy King* ast if enny o' t' lads wad set am towerts Pardsah,+ as he was ruyder short seetit, an' med pit inta t' becks. Tom Wilson was riddy for owt 'at leukt like fun, an' he wad steer dansy heamm. When they gat ta Cross-yats beck, Tom thowt it wazzent seaff for beath to venter ower t' sleatt brig at a time, nn' they and tak t' watter. It wad be towerts a yerd deep at t’ hee side, an' Tom pot am next that side , an’ telt am ta hod weel up. When thet war fairly in t’ deepest on’t, Tom mannisht ta stummer an' fo', an' bring t' maister wid am,—an' beath heel ta crowl oot like two hofe droont rattans. Tom set am on a bit, an' than com back ta t' Cross, wot as he was, bit he care't nowt aboot that if he nobbet gat a bit o' spwort raizt; an' seah endit that club day, an' menny anudder sec like, beath afoor an' sen.
